Tax policies are one of the important fiscal tools with the government to achieve the twin national objectives i.e. maintaining economic stability while boosting economic growth of the nation. The recent indirect tax policy reform in the form of Goods and Services Tax (GST) by government is believed to be transformative and visionary in that it would help the government to minimize its fiscal deficit due to wider horizontal span of tax, elimination of operational as well as structural inefficiencies in the taxation system and redistribution of resources from less productive to more productive sectors. In present socio-economic and political context, GST has become a buzz word and the government officials, policy makers and laymen are very much aware about its implications on the economy. However, two waves of thoughts have evolved on GST’s implications on agricultural sector, which can be classified into myths and reality. This article attempts to bring together the myths and realities and tries to break the myths regarding its implications on agricultural sector. The present article has been divided into two parts namely – myths and realities and concludes after discussing the two in detail and is restricted to agriculture only leaving aside dairy farming, poultry farming, stock breeding, cutting of wood or grass, gathering of fruit, raising of man-made forest or rearing of seedlings or plants (as the definition of agriculture excludes these in model GST).

Myths about implications of GST on agricultural sector:

Here are some of the popular GST myths about the implications of GST on agricultural sector that have mushroomed up and molded the mindset of different stakeholder in one way or ignoring other side. These myths are:

- Prices of different fertilizers will increase after implementation of GST.
- Impact on organic farming will be negative due to increase in price of the fertilizers and the pesticides.
- Usage of plant protection chemicals will reduce after GST implementation.
- Effect on micro-irrigation practices is not clear.
- Cost of farm mechanization would be higher as prices of agricultural machineries have increased after GST implementation.
- The prices of agricultural services will remain the same as agricultural services are kept outside GST.
- GST will lead to increase in prices of agricultural commodities.
- Agricultural supply chain would be ill affected as logistic services to be taxed under GST.
- GST will slow down the growth of agricultural sector.
- Realities about implications of GST on agricultural sector:

We attempt to answer these above mentioned myths after a comprehensive study of tax rates on agricultural commodities in Value Added Tax (VAT) and excise as well as GST regime of taxation and clarify the myths.

Because of various exemptions/tax concessions to the fertilizer industries in excise and VAT regime the total incidence of tax on fertilizer products was about 5-10 per cent of the value of finished fertilizer products. However, placement of fertilizers in five percent tax slab after the implementation of GST would decrease overall tax on fertilizers by 2-3 per cent as a result of which the prices of fertilizers fell.

Under Secretary to the Government of India fertilizers like Urea, Di-Ammonium Phos- phate (DAP) and Muriate of Potash (MoP) are expected to be reduced by Rs. 6, 11 and 18 per bag, respectively. As a result of a marginal reduction in the price of fertilizers, their usage is expected to increase and consequently the crop production.

On the other hand, prior to implementa- tion of GST, the tax rates on micronutrient fertilizers were different across the states (4, 6, 5.5, 0 and 0 per cent in UP, Maratha- rashtra, Karnataka, MP and Punjab respectively) but lower when compared with the tax rates after GST implementation. The price rise of micronutrient fertilizers because of their placement in 12 per cent tax slab may act as deterrent to their usage in micronutri- cent deficient areas but would certainly encourage their judicious application in regions of rampant usage.

It’s unjust to say that organic farming will be negatively affected after GST implementation as the inputs used in organic farming namely bio-fertilizers, bio- pesticides, and bio-stimulants are not defined under any tax slab in GST regime. It would be unjust to attribute rise in price of these inputs if any due to any reason to GST. However, the branded farm yard manure (FYM) is taxable @ 5 percent under GST regime. But, it is to be consid- ered that, the usage of branded FYM is restricted to gardening in urban areas and its share in total organic manure con- sumption for crop production may be neg- ligible. Neither the commercial organic farms nor farmers apply any branded FYM for crop production. Hence, GST doesn’t have any negative implications on organic farming practices for commercial crop production.

Plant protection chemicals like pesti- cides, weedicides, rodenticides and herbi- cides are indispensable part of modern agricultural system. However, their rampant usage leads to several critical problems like residue accumulation in soil, bio-magnification and loss of benefi- cial fauna from the agricultural ecosys- tem. 18 per cent taxation on plant prot- ection chemicals would check their rampant usage and call for their judicious applica- tion which would not only compensate their price rise but also benefits the envi- ronment and biodiversity. On the other hand, Maharashtra witnessed reduction in tax rate on plant protection chemicals by 0.5 percent which was 18.5 per cent prior to GST. The recent unrest linked to plant protection chemicals in different parts of the country should not be viewed in higher prices but to their quality. It is well accepted fact that the farmers are ready to pay higher prices for the plant protec- tion chemicals if the quality of it is on par with the standards set for it.

Micro-irrigation being an important component of precision farming prac- tices is instrumental in increasing the resource use efficiency in agriculture. Apart from raising the resource use effi- ciency, micro-irrigation (drip and spin- kler irrigation system) is an economical strategy to irrigate the land in the regions with limited terrain.

It is true that, manually operated/ animal driven and power driven land preparation agricultural equipments are taxed @ 12 per cent in GST regime which were non-taxable under central excise and VAT regime. However, it is to be noted that, growth of the farm mech- anization in major crops like paddi, wheat, sugarcane, cotton and corn in India is led by tractor and harvester of which tractor led growth is more signifi- cant. The cumulative tax rate on tractor and power tillers is reduced by 4.5 to 6.5 percent in different states in GST regime whereas the harvesting equipments become costly by six to eight percent in different states. On the other hand, cen- trifugal pumps used to pump water for irrigation has become cheaper by about 3.5 to 6.5 percent in states like UP, Punjab and Maharashtra respectively. On the flip side of coin, plant protection equipments like sprayers and dusters are taxed more after GST implementa- tion. It is to be noted that, the decline in price of heavy farm machineries is greater than the increase in cost of smaller farm equipments after imple- mentation of GST.

It is partially true that the price of agri- cultural services will remain same due to exclusion of agricultural services from GST. Agricultural services include- a) farm related services (agricultural opera- tions directly related to production of any agricultural produce which do not alter essential characteristics of agricultural produce but make it marketable for the primary market, renting of agro machinery or vacant land with or without a struc- ture incidental to its use; secondary mar- keting; agricultural extension services; services provided by any Agri- cultural Produce Marketing Committee or Board or services provided by a commis- sion agent for sale or purchase of agri- cultural produce, etc.), b) agricultural services (viz. marketing, insurance and warehousing and transportation) and c) research and development (R&D) services.

The current policy of indirect tax partially exempts the agricultural services and includes some of the above mentioned services like R&D services under tax radar. Agricultural commodities which are consumed in fresh or raw form like fruits and vegetables, milk and items of daily importance like sugar, milked rice, wheat flour, and pulses etc. which are not sold under any brand are non-taxable items within the GST regime. Any agricul- tural commodity that undergoes intense pro- cessing that changes its essential charac- teristics like tea, coffee, bakery products, and other processed products of indus- tries which draws its raw materials from agricultural sector are taxed under differ- ent categories. Thus, it is to be noted that, price of all agricultural commodities will not experience hike post-GST implemen- tation. On the other hand, food product constitutes only 19 per cent of overall FMCG industry in 2016 that means major- ity of the food trade in India is mostly done by unorganized players in unbranded form. Hence, the prices of food items of daily consumption importance except the branded food product will not experience any hike due to GST.

It is thought that small traders in small town that the cost of logistics of farm produce would increase as many of the services have been included under tax net. But, in actual the real cost of logistics and supply chain would not experience hike after GST implementation. It is expected that in GST regime about 20 per cent timing at the interstate checkpoint to be reduced and the run time of the road transportation will increase by another 80-100 km per day which not only increase the logistics effi- ciency of the supply chain but also curtail the wastage of the perishables during transit. Additionally, this E-way bill will not only ease the movement of freight further and the receipt would act as goods ticket for the entire journey but will also help to track the location of goods carrier and thereby help in delivering the commodities at the destination in time.

GST has multi-fold influence on the growth of agricultural sector in the country. On the one hand it creates a con- genital environment to boost up agricultur- al production and productivity by positive- ly affecting the input markets (like fertilizer, power operated land preparation equipments mainly tractors and power tillers, irrigation equipments etc.) and on the other hand it helps in addressing the institutional challenges; supply side con- straints (like higher waiting time in toll booth, multiplicity of taxation, trade barri- ers on the state borders etc.) that would increase the efficiency of agricultural supply chains across the nation and thereby make agricultural produce avail- able to the masses. Elimination of multiple taxes and cascading effect of taxation, increased compliance and better resource allocation would not only weed out the inefficiencies of agricultural system but also bring the sector on faster growth trajectory. Hence, in post GST era, agricultural sector is likely to witness a sustained and equitable growth.

Conclusion

The change in the rate of game of tax- ation has infused the sector with drivers like higher efficiency, transparency and greater compliance which are strong enough to pull out the sector out of initial hiccups. The comparative study of agri- cultural sector in excise and VAT regime as well as in GST regime makes it very clear that, inputs like seed, fertilizers, centrifugal pumps, tractor and power tiller are bound to become cheaper in the new tax regime while the plant protection chemicals, micronutrient fertilizers and harvesters price may go up slightly, whose incremental cost is less than the incremental benefits of the decrease in prices of other inputs. On the product side only processed and branded agri- cultural products are bound to experi- ence little price hike. However, majority of the food consumption in India is in the fresh form and since the commodities which require processing and are of daily consumption (rice, pulses, oilseeds, sugar etc.) are zero rated, thereby will not have any negative implications on consumption side also. Hence, agricul- ture sector is not likely to witness any negative impact.

Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, a determinant nationalist and a statesman, was born on 31st October, 1875 in Nadiad village of Gujarat. Starting his education in a Gujarati medium school, he later shifted to an English medium school. In 1897, he passed his high school and went to pursue a degree in commerce. He completed his law degree in 1913 from Inns of Court. Patel came to know about the British approach to law practice in Godhra, Gujarat. For his legal proficiency, he was offered many lucrative posts by the British government but he rejected as he was opposed to the British government and its laws. Later, Patel shifted his practice to Ahmadabad. He became a member of the Gujarati Club where he attended a lecture by Mahatma Gandhi. Gandhi was so impressed by him and he soon adopted Gandhian principles.

Sardar Patel's Contribution in Politics

In 1917, Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel was elected as the Secretary of the Gujarat wing of the Indian National Congress. The Congress then took a stand on the Babrhi Masjid issue in 1918. Patel was a leading member of the Non-Cooperation Movement launched by Gandhi.

Sardar Patel's vision and philosophy became a true determinant nationalist and a statesman, was born on 31st October, 1875 in Nadiad village of Gujarat. Starting his education in a Gujarati medium school, he later shifted to an English medium school. In 1897, he passed his high school and went to pursue a degree in commerce. He completed his law degree in 1913 from Inns of Court. Patel came to know about the British approach to law practice in Godhra, Gujarat. For his legal proficiency, he was offered many lucrative posts by the British government but he rejected as he was opposed to the British government and its laws. Later, Patel shifted his practice to Ahmadabad. He became a member of the Gujarati Club where he attended a lecture by Mahatma Gandhi. Gandhi was so impressed by him and he soon adopted Gandhian principles.

In 1917, Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel was elected as the Secretary of the Gujarat wing of the Indian National Congress. The Congress then took a stand on the Babrhi Masjid issue in 1918. Patel was a leading member of the Non-Cooperation Movement launched by Gandhi. Patel left no stone unturned to boost the feeling of nationalism as he recruited three lakh members and collect over fifteen lakh rupees.

In 1930, Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel was among the leaders imprisoned for participating in the Salt March initiated by Mahatma Gandhi. His inspiring speeches during the "Salt March" transmuted a million salt makers and thousands of people, who later played a major role in making the movement successful.

He led the Civil Disobedience Movement in Gujarat when Gandhi was under imprisonment, upon the recommendation of fellow Congress members. Sardar Patel was freed in 1931, following an agreement signed between Gandhi and the British. This agreement was considered as the Vicerecy of Indian leaders by many experts and historians.

Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel was elected as the President of Indian National Congress in its Karachi session where the party deliberated its future path. Congress committed itself towards defence of fundamental and human rights. It was in this session that the dream of a secular nation was conceived.

During the legislative elections of 1934, Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel campaigned for the Indian National Congress. Though he did not contest, Sardar Patel helped his fellow party members during the election.

In the 1942 Quit India Movement, Patel continued his unwavering support to Gandhi when the British insisted on the British was taken away from the farmers. His efforts to bring together the farmers of his area brought him respect.

He supported the non-cooperation Movement launched by Gandhi. Patel left no stone unturned to boost the feeling of nationalism as he recruited three lakh members and collect over fifteen lakh rupees.

Again, during the farmers' movement, he supported the non-cooperation Movement launched by Gandhi. Patel left no stone unturned to boost the feeling of nationalism as he recruited three lakh members and collect over fifteen lakh rupees.

After India achieved Independence, Patel became the first Home Minister and also the Deputy Prime Minister. He also assumed charges of three other portfolios - home, information, and broadcasting, and states. He worked in this position for three years.

Sardar Patel's Contribution in Uniting India

Sardar Patel was a leading member of the Indian National Congress. He was appointed on his recommendation. He was the key force in establishing the Indian Administration and the Development of the Indian Police Service. He took personal interest in initiating a reconstruction of the Territorial Police Force in the princely states of Gujarat. Patel dealt ruthlessly with the Pakistan's efforts to invade Kashmir in September 1947. He was a strong advocate of a united India and a strong were threatened. By October 1947, he had managed to establish a fully united Indian state.

Today, in such a time when separatist forces are active in the various parts of the country, the training of the Territorial Police Force in Gujarat and the reactionists are rising in different areas and communities in the country, Sardar Patel's contribution in establishing a united India is more significant. The Iron Man who united India will keep inspiring the people of the nation to be united.
